Evidence

LEARNING OUTCOMES

The learning outcomes are based on the outcomes expected of graduates of Canadian common law programs. They include the ability to:

- Identify the purpose of the law of evidence and how that purpose informs which evidence we admit and how we use it in the relevant system of adjudication;
- Provide some theoretical and social context to the rules;
- Critically evaluate the extent to which the rules of evidence can safeguard against wrongful convictions and biased decision making;
- Identify the basic foundational elements of the common law approach to the law of evidence;
- Effectively identify admissibility issues with respect to evidence including the application of a relevant exclusionary rule(s);
- Understand the role of discretion in the law of evidence;
- Effectively identify and critically assess the basic principles and rules governing the proof of matters and evaluation of evidence in adjudicative proceedings;
- Reason persuasively in the context of fact-finding; and,
- Apply the law to new facts.

EXAMINATION

The function of the exam is to determine whether applicants can effectively demonstrate the learning outcomes expected of graduates from Canadian common law programs. To pass the examination, candidates are expected to identify the relevant evidentiary issues, select and identify the key Canadian cases and principles, and explain how the law applies on each of the relevant issues, given the facts presented. Candidates will also be expected to understand the process of fact-finding and demonstrate the ability to apply it to a given set of facts. Depending on the question, some critical reflection may also be required including identifying arguments based on the readings to address a systemic issue such as wrongful convictions or gender and racial bias. Those who fail to identify the key issues, or who demonstrate confusion on core legal concepts, or who merely list the issues and describe legal rules without demonstrating how they apply in the factual context presented will not succeed.
